

Amit Dat is the head of the Intellectual Property and Information Technologies practice in FBC's Corporate Department.

Amit's practice concentrates on technology oriented legal matters. He provides legal counsel to private and public companies (local and multi-national) with respect to intellectual property, information technology, privacy, data protection, information security, commercial activities in the cyberspace, internet law, and media and entertainment law.

Amit has extensive experience in advising clients on various types of intellectual property transactions, including investment in companies whose primary asset is IP, development agreements, purchasing and licensing of intellectual property, content and data transfers, as well as services in the arena of big data, web intelligence industry and other information-oriented transactions.