

Dr Onyeka Osuji (PhD, BCL, LLB, BL, FHEA) is a Reader in Law at the University of Essex School of Law, UK. He was formerly a Senior Lecturer and Director of the Centre for Commercial and Corporate Law, Law School, University of Exeter, UK. He obtained his PhD (Law) from the University of Manchester, BCL (Law) from the University of Oxford and LLB (Law) from the University of Nigeria. Dr Osuji's research interests include corporate social responsibility, corporate governance, consumer protection, globalization and regulation. Some of his current research projects include regulating corporate social responsibility in emerging and developing markets, technological licensing framework for 3D printed content with a particular focus on China, and legal framework for non-financial reporting in a globalized context. Dr Osuji is a fellow of the Higher Education Academy UK. He is qualified as a barrister and solicitor of Nigeria and a (non-practising) solicitor of England and Wales. He has been in legal practice and has advised individuals, corporations and national and international governmental and non-governmental organizations.