

Ryan Shandler, University of Haifa

Ryan Shandler is a Ph.D. candidate at the School of Political Sciences in the University of Haifa. Ryan holds a Bachelor of Laws (Hons) from Melbourne University, Australia, and an M.A. in Peace and Conflict Management from the University of Haifa. His research focuses on the social, psychological, legal and human rights implications of Internet deprivation, as well as the policy implications of a new dichotomy of cyber dependence and vulnerability. His current research utilizes controlled laboratory and field experiments to quantitatively measure the effects of prolonged cyber-disconnection.
