

Steve van de Weijer is researcher at the Netherlands Institute for the Study of Crime and Law Enforcement (NSCR) since September 2014. In March 2014 he defended his thesis on the intergenerational transmission of violent delinquency. He is specialised in quantitative research methods and his research focuses on life-course criminology, biosocial criminology and criminal careers. More recently, he also started to study victims and perpetrators of cybercrime from a life-course criminological perspective.